

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO SITHABILE CUSTOMERS

The Protection of Personal Information Act, 2013 (POPI Act) took effect on 1 July 2021. It creates two roles for entities that have access to and process “personal information”, which is described as information and characteristics that may disclose the identity of a person (natural or juristic) and in that way, infringe on that person’s right to privacy. The full definition can be found in the POPI Act. The roles the POPI Act creates are those of ‘responsible party’ and ‘operator’.

Sithabile Technology Services (Pty Ltd (STS) provides systems on/over which customers can transmit any kind of information or ‘data’ including their own or other personal information, to the backup/storage facility. We would like to make it clear that in the supply of storage and backup services along with maintenance and support and the relevant software and hardware, STS acts as a service provider and supplier, NOT an operator. You do NOT need to send us an operator contract as we do not act as operators.

At no stage, do we have sight of, or access to, the content of the data you send for backup or storage. Therefore, whether or not it includes personal information is not relevant to or visible by us and we do not collect, alter, aggregate or modify personal information contained in your data.

Our services are pure transit and storage of whatever you choose to use the services for and whatever you may choose to backup and store. We offer a facility – we do not deal with the information in the facility.

We will process personal information that we take from each customer to register you on our system, confirm your creditworthiness, and liaise with you for invoicing and collect payment. The terms and conditions of processing are available in our Privacy Policy (this processing is not the same as processing data that you decide to send to and store on our system). In limited circumstances we may apply to CGIC for insurance in relation to your contract debt, in which case CGIC has provided us with the following undertaking:
